NOTES FROM JACOB

I'm borrowing the paragraph below from an article I read this week called "A Case for the Church Choir." The author makes the case that volunteer church choirs are still an integral part of worship in the 21st century for 4 reasons. 1) The church choirs motivation is different from any other musical ensemble in society 2) choir members find inspiration in rehearsal and worship 3) Fellowship – A healthy choir can be one of the strongest small groups in a congregation 4) Love... Listen to what the author has to say about Love

"Love is what makes a volunteer church choir: love of music, love for each other, and especially love of the Savior. Love brings a young entrepreneur rushing in for rehearsal after a week of conferences in a foreign country. Love inspires a businessman to drive several hours through holiday traffic to make the dress rehearsal for a Christmas concert. Love causes a young couple to rearrange their lives so that choir rehearsal becomes "date night" on a weekly basis. (None of these examples are imagined)."
